315 And Other Hopes

It was as big as big can be. Alabama defeated Auburn. The win gave Alabama a share of the Southeastern Conference Championship. Bama will go to Dallas to meet Texas in the Cotton Bowl. And the Tide will be one of perhaps four teams which can win the national championship. But the biggest of it all was coach Bryant. Someone wins the Alabama-Auburn game every year, someone wins the SEC championship every year, dozens of teams go to bowl games every year, and at least one team wins the national championship every year. (And the Crimson Tide is regularly in all those categories.) But in this year coach Bryant won his 315th game as a college head coach, moving him to the top of the list.

Bama's victory was really coach Bryant's victory. Few people stress the "we" of college athletics (as opposed to the "I") more than coach Bryant, but try as he might he could not divert attention from himself and his accomplishment last Saturday. The quest for 315 had almost become an albatross around the neck of this Alabama team and when it came it brought relief as much as it brought joy to the Alabama football family.

There can be no doubt that coach Bryant wanted the record. Although he will not admit to personal accomplishment, the successful completion of the mission cannot help but add to his luster as perhaps the greatest football coach of all time. No one succeeds as he has without a special ambition.

The Tide is now 9-1-1, the same as Texas. Bama cannot have the best record in college football this year, but the Tide can still win the national championship. Two big pieces fell into place Saturday, Bama dropping Auburn and Pittsburgh being devastated by Penn State. Both games were nationally televised and, in view of the Tide's recent victory over Penn State and the tremendous attention coach Bryant's record received, Bama's stock in the polls could go up.

As of now the teams with the best shot at winning the national championship are Clemson (which controls its own destiny), Georgia (which lost to Clemson and is now playing a somewhat tainted Pittsburgh team), Nebraska (which will be going against the nation's top-ranked team) and Alabama. Georgia still has one regular season game to play, but it's against Georgia Tech which has managed to win only one game this year. For Bama to win the national championship it will probably take a Pittsburgh victory over Georgia, an unimpressive Nebraska win over Clemson and a very impressive Tide win over Texas. That's a lot to happen, but not nearly as much as was needed when Bama was 4-1-1 and ranked 15th in the nation in mid-October.

Meanwhile, coach Bryant has assured us he will be around for other national championship battles. Speaking the day before Thanksgiving he said "First off, I'm not as old as I look. I don't know what the future holds, but I'll certainly be back next year. After that, it depends on how The University feels and how I feel. I feel better now that I have in fifteen years. In summary, I hope to be here until I retire or I have to work for free (because of state retirement laws)." To Bama faithful (and Tide assistant coaches on the recruiting trail) that news was as welcome as victory 315.

The man of the hour as he head coached his 315th college football victory Saturday was Bama's Paul William "Bear" Bryant. The mob scene following Bama's 28-17 victory over Auburn prevented the traditional mid-field coaches' post mortem and greetings.

Big Plays Get Tide Over Tigers

There was a feeling that Alabama just had to win the football game. Auburn is almost certainly going to defeat Alabama at some point in football, but it just would not have been right for it to have been this year. Pat Dye's Tigers gave it their best in trying to spoil the Alabama party, but Bama came up with the big plays it had to have, particularly in the fourth quarter.

Bama probably never should have been in such a predicament, trailing the Tigers in the final period. The Tide had a reasonable opportunity to put the game away early after dodging a few bullets. But Auburn can look back and find plenty of squandered chances, too. The War Eagles almost certainly threw away at least 12 points in field goals, and it doesn't take much figuring to see what that could have done to a 28-17 score.

It was a game of many big plays. Coach Bryant has often said that in a close game some six or seven plays offensively and defensively will be the difference in victory and defeat. There may have been more against the Tigers. Four times Auburn knocked at the Alabama goal and came up with no points—twice because of missed field goals, once because of an interception by Tommy Wilcox and once when the holder dropped the snap on another field goal attempt. All four of Bama's touchdowns were the result of at least one big play. There were big runs and big passes on both sides, crucial penalties for and against both sides, massive breakdowns in the kicking game on both sides and turnovers that hurt (and helped) both sides. Mr. Momentum must have been dizzy after all the swinging he did Saturday.

Auburn had the first shot with the upper hand after a long punt return deep into Alabama territory. Jay Grogan made a saving tackle and then the Tide defense stiffened, forcing the first of four Auburn field goals tries and the first of three unsuccessful attempts. Then Bama went on top when Alan Gray dashed 62 yards, setting up his own one-yard touchdown sneak that punt the Tide up 7-0. Auburn tied the score when the Tigers caught Bama in a stunt and ran off tackle on a 63-yard touchdown run.

Ken Coley hadn't played in a game and a half, but he started the second half for Alabama at quarterback and took the Tide to a go-ahead touchdown, the score coming on a shovel pass to Jesse Bendross, who lined up at tight end on the right side and followed the blocks of Ricky Moore, Linnie Patrick and Joey Jones around left end to the end zone.

Two Bama mistakes on the kicking game gave Auburn 10 points and the lead. Joey Jones, who is as sure-handed as they come, misplayed two Auburn punts, one setting up a touchdown and one leading to a field goal as Auburn took the lead.

Bama takes great pride in thinking the fourth quarter belongs to the Tide, but that had not always been the case this year. Saturday it was. Walter Lewis took Bama on a go-ahead touchdown march, hitting Bendross on a key third down play, running for a key first down on third down and finally hitting Bendross (again from tight end, but this time on a post pattern) on a long scoring pass. Alabama put the final nail in the coffin when Linnie Patrick took over midway through the final quarter. The sophomore, who doesn't start but who is often in the game when Bama has to have its best to win, made a 33-yard run that ranks as one of the finest ever seen, then followed it with a 15-yard sweep that finished the scoring.

Alabama was hurt by its own mistakes, particularly not completing passes to open receivers in the early going. The Tide also had to play without All-SEC tackle Bob Cayavec and backup guard Gary Bramblett, who had been suspended, and Auburn's defensive line gave Bama's offensive front fits.

Several had spectacular games for Alabama. Benny Perrin played the best he has ever played for the Tide, and Tommy Wilcox joined him as a standout in the Tide secondary. Robbie Jones was excellent at linebacker, while Warren Lyles, Jackie Cline and Mike Pitts were the top men up front. Ricky Moore played his best game ever, making 25 blocks (including 10 knockdowns). Bendross also rated the spectacular label. Not far behind were Jeremiah Castille and Russ Wood on defense, Paul Carruth, Linnie Patrick, Jeff Fagan and Ken Simon on offense. All three Tide quarterbacks had good (and bad) moments, but Lewis in the fourth quarter was the top banana of the bunch.

Alabama was in a hitting game Saturday and several Tiders are worse for the wear. Ken Coley had a knee injury (not to the one that was operated on during the 1980 season) that could be serious. Joe Carter suffered an injury to a nerve. Jim Bob Harris missed the second half with a groin injury, and Randy Edwards, who injured a hand, didn't start the second half. Several others suffered injuries and re-injuries which did not seem to be as critical.

Bama just missed breaking its own national record for fewest interceptions in a season. Auburn picked off one Tide pass, which was only the second of the year against Alabama.

Some records did fall, however. Malcolm Simmons set a new Tide punting record with a 43.9 average and the team average of 44.1 was also a record. Bama also set marks for most field goals in a season (17), average yards per intercepted pass return (15.9) and most fumbles (50). The 27 lost fumbles tied the record of the 1952 team.

Tide freshman fullback Ricky Moore had an outstanding game against Auburn as he blocked 25 times, 10 of them knockdowns, and also had success as a runner, finishing the season as Bama's most prolific running back.

Tide Cagers Have Good Opening Show

Those who follow the sports programs of the University of Alabama generally are concerned with performance, the won-lost record. Alabama's basketball team has demonstrated it can be expected to be a successful one this year. But more than that, it has shown that it is going to be worth the price of admission to see this team perform. The Tide is entertaining. A combination of speed, athletic talent and ball-handling ability means this squad is going to be moving the basketball up and down the court.

Bama broke away from New Hampshire in the opener, watched the Wildcats close the gap, then raced to a 99-65 decision. Bama was to play Tennessee-Martin (coached by former LSU assistant Art Tolis) Tuesday, then swing into Texas for games at Texas Tech Saturday and SMU Monday. Bama's Southeastern Conference opener comes December 12 in Tuscaloosa against C. M. Newton's Vanderbilt team.

Alabama, as would be expected in an opening game, had some breakdowns defensively and offensively in the opener. "You get that because what you do in practice doesn't always transfer to what you do in games," explained Tide head coach Wimp Sanderson. He said that defensive breakdowns included not guarding the man with the ball well and not giving sound offside help. His only complaint on offense was "some of the young guys are not yet smooth in what we're trying to do. They recognize it, though, so it should be just a matter of time and practice."

Coach Sanderson was pleased with overall effort, with the improvement by the veterans (particularly in making the transition from offense to defense) and by the performance of the new players. Ennis Whatley, who started at point guard when Eric Richardson was unable to play, and Bobby Lee Hurt—both prep All-Americans last year—had particularly good debuts.

If there was a surprising deficiency it was Alabama's rebounding work, particularly on the offensive boards. "I thought that would be a strength for us this year, but we went through a period in the first half where we didn't go to the offensive boards," said coach Sanderson. "We need to correct that, and I think we will. A lot of those were long rebounds and we just didn't get any of them. We weren't moving to the basketball. A couple of times our shooter was falling back instead of following his shot."

Tide freshman point guard Ennis Whatley may make some freshman mistakes, but he's an outstanding basketball playermaker. He's currently starting for the 1980-81 Tide basketball team. Joel Barnes Photo

Coach Sanderson played 11 of the 13 men on his team in the opening game. The two who did not see action are both point guards, which gave Bama something of a depth problem. Eddie Adams, a senior, has been out since early in Alabama practice with a knee injury suffered in a freak accident (shooting an uncontested layup). He was expected to begin working again either late this week or early next week. Eric Richardson, a sophomore, began limited work Sunday after having missed ten days with ankle and groin injuries.

Bama started against New Hampshire with Eddie Phillips at strong forward, Cliff Windham at small forward, Phillip Lockett at center, Mike Davis at big guard and Whatley at point guard. Hurt, Terry Williams, Maurice Myers and Mark Farmer saw playing time inside, while Vance Wheeler and Rex Jones played in the backcourt. Coach Sanderson expected to keep his starting lineup the same for at least the Tennessee-Martin game, but he continues to emphasize he's not concerned with who starts, rather getting as many as possible contributing. He's undoubtedly interested in downplaying the importance of starting because he doesn't want a player such as Hurt impacting.

Many of the enthusiastic first-nighters were obviously there to see the two heralded freshmen and Whatley and Hurt didn't disappoint. Hurt was seven of nine from the field (but a ghastly three for eight from the free throw line) for 17 points and had three blocked shots and 10 rebounds. Whatley had 11 points and handed out seven assists, most of them spectacular passes.

Coach Bryant On Bama

"I'm happy for the team and I'm proud of them for winning. Defensively we played very well in the first half except on the play when we went to sleep—or Auburn did a good job. In the second half we had almost eighty yards in losses on the kicking game and I didn't know what to think.

"To turn it around and come back and win the way we did was one of the greatest wins I've ever been associated with.

"I would rather have come from behind and won in the fourth quarter. It proves to our players that they have class and character and it shows them what can be done in the future. I don't think this loss will hurt Auburn. They fought their hearts out, and they're going to get better. I just hope they don't get too much better in the next few years.

"There were some great plays on both sides and I thought there were people who played well on both sides. On our side, everyone contributed, even the scout team which helped us prepare for the game. I'm tremendously proud of everyone who had anything to do with it. It was a great victory.

"It was an important win for several reasons. First of all it was Auburn, our cross-state rival and an excellent football team. Second, we were playing for the conference championship. And, third, we're playing for the national championship.

"We'll go on to the Cotton Bowl now and play Texas. Had we lost against Auburn I was afraid the same thing might happen as in 1972. We lost to Auburn that year and it was never a game in Dallas. Before the Auburn game I told the players—and I still think so—that everything was falling right in line and if we did our part and kept on winning we had a chance at the biggie. And that's what happened with Penn State beating Pittsburgh. I still think we have a chance—an outside one. But, of course, the big thing happening was us beating Auburn and winning the conference. We've lost very few conference games in the past few years.

"A real big thing to me is none of our players have lost to Auburn. Our seniors, in particular, I'm proud and happy for. I felt the entire team owed them something, which was a victory over Auburn.

"I did a poor job. We had a week off and we worked on everything but our basics too much. We had too much offense going into the game, offense we didn't use and offense that helped us only a little. We got away from our basics. As a result, we didn't do as well as normally we would do.

"Our offensive line was in terrible condition physically. Roy Rumbley, who started the Tennessee game, hasn't practiced since. Jim Brock has been in and out and hasn't had any practice and couldn't play. A couple of others (Bob Cayavec and Gary Bramblett, who were suspended two days before the game for curfew violations) weren't going to play. Larry Brown came off crutches Friday. A couple of our young freshmen, Hardy Walker and Willard Scissum, who we think are going to be great players, have been working on sore ankles. As a result we played our first offensive line practically the whole game. Despite that, they were better in the fourth quarter.

"As for the record the players set, I'm thankful to the good Lord for the many wonderful people at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and here. Carney Laslie and Frank Moseley (former coaches now deceased) had as much to do with this as anyone. I wish they could have been here. And there were others who couldn't be here. All these people make it more meaningful for me. I wish they could have been here. It hasn't set in yet. I feel like I ought to go back and check the scoreboard to make sure we won before rigor mortis sets in."

Asked if it was a relief to break the record: "I think so. I haven't had long enough to think about it. It's been a hard year for me. I haven't been strong enough or bright enough. Not until the last three or four days did it really dawn on me. The people involved let me know they expected it to be done. They let me know I'm the leader and they expected me to get it done. I would have hated to have had to face them and said 'We've got to try to do this again.'"

Asked if he would have preferred the win to come against another team: "I'd rather it have come today. Now I can go home and get in front of the television set and watch the replay."

Asked if Pittsburgh's loss brightened Alabama's chances for the national championship: "I don't know. Everyone ranked high is in a bowl. Watching us at times today you'd forget about us. On the other hand they had some bright spots that should have gotten us some attention. If we do well, you never know what will happen."

Asked about winning in the fourth quarter: "It's a whole lot better that way. It does the players good. They're going to get behind in life and have to come back."

Asked about Cotton Bowl plans: "We'll do about the same as we did last year for the ones who have been playing. We'll give them a few days off. The ones who haven't been playing, particularly some of our young linemen, are going to get some work. And we're going to work with those people who have been fumbling trying to eliminate some of that."

On Linnie Patrick's 32-yard run leading to the final Alabama touchdown: "I believe that may be as great a run as any I've ever seen. I just wish I could reach that young man. He'd be something. If he'd study and do the other things he's got to do he'd be a great one."
